

Siobhan Morden

Head of Latin America Fixed Income Strategy
Nomura

Siobhan Morden is Head of Latin America Fixed Income Strategy at Nomura with more than 24 years of experience and recently joined the firm from a similar role at Jefferies with a focus on distressed and stressed sovereign credits and previously RBS, where she was Head of Latin America Strategy across local and external markets.

Previously, she was Head of Research & Strategy for North America and Head of Emerging Markets Latin America Research & Strategy at ABN AMRO. Prior to that, she was Head of Emerging Markets Research at Caboto (Banca Intesa), and a Senior Fixed Income Analyst at both PaineWebber and Santander Investment Securities.

Siobhan received an MA from New York University, a BA from Boston College and a graduate Economics and Law certificate from the Universidad del Pais Vasco in San Sebastian, Spain, where she was a Fulbright Scholar.