

Gregory A. Riddle

Vice President, Investor Relation
Eastman Company

Greg Riddle currently holds the position of Vice President, Investor Relation with Eastman Company and is located in New York City. Greg has lead Eastman's Investor Relations function for over ten years, reporting to the Chief Financial Officer. In this capacity, Greg works with senior company executives to communicate with investors, including through quarterly earnings announcements and conference calls with financial analysts, presentations at investor conferences, and responding to investor inquiries.

Prior to assuming Investor Relations responsibilities, Greg was Director, International Trade Relations in the Government Relations department for Eastman Chemical Company. Based in Washington, DC, Greg was responsible for lobbying Congress and regulatory agencies on a range of international trade, legal, and human resource issues for the Company.

Prior to joining Eastman, Greg served as Research Coordinator for the Biotechnology Industry Organization (BIO) in Washington, DC. While with BIO for over five years, Greg lobbied Congress on issues of importance to the biotechnology industry and contributed to numerous reports that considered the impact of proposed legislation on the industry.

Greg holds a Masters degree in public administration from George Mason University, a B.A. degree in political science from George Washington University, and a Certificate in International Business Management from Georgetown University. Greg and his wife Blaine currently live in Basking Ridge, New Jersey with two children.