

Tony Morris

Global Head of Quantitative Strategies, Nomura

Tony Morris is Nomura's Global Head of Quantitative Strategies (QS) team. Unlike other teams in the industry, Nomura's QS team has its roots in fixed income rather than equities. Clients rate the team highly, pointing to its macro heritage, blend of economic and empirical analysis, pragmatism, track records and coherence of approach. The team's work has won prizes for derivatives analysis and product design, including the 2016 Risk.net Buy-Side Award, Institutional Investment Product of the Year, recognizing Nomura's trend following UCITS fund. This strategy has outperformed benchmarks and prominent competitors

Tony holds a PhD in Financial Economics from New York University and a BA from Dartmouth College, where he earned a place in the Phi Beta Kappa Academic Honor Society.